Musical Artists On Programme

CLASSICAL CONCERT NEXT MONDAY EVENING IN OCEAN BEACH

An affair which is promised to be the first of a series of high class concerts in Ocean Beach is to be presented at the new clubhouse on Monday next, June 6, at 8 p. m., by Mr. T. M. Harvey, assisted by various artists and given under the auspices of the Ocean Beach Woman's club. On this occasion Mr. Harvey will present Mrs. Bertha Piper, soprano, and Miss Ivy Button, pianist, from his San Diego studio, while Miss Nina Roddie will play a group of violincello solos.

Mrs. Piper needs no introduction to the radio public, as she is well known as a very popular contributor to the KFSD programs while Miss Button is equally well known in a different capacity, being the assistant piano teacher of the city studio of Professor Harvey.

Miss Roddie, another of San Diego's musical prodigies, has already made many concert appearances with unfailing success, for, although very young in years she has already had the advantage of many years' constant training under that excellent instructor, Mr. Merrill Baldwin.

At this concert, for the first time, a group of Mr. Harvey's own compositions will be sung by Mrs. Bertha Piper, while the instrumental numbers will consist of four groups of piano duets.

It is earnestly hoped that a large attendance will be present on this auspicious occasion, the proceeds of which will go to the very worthy aims of the local Woman's club of Ocean Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Sullivan have purchased the new Hamilton home on Ostend Court. Mr. and Mrs. Sullivan are new arrivals from Seattle and state they immediately fell in love with Mission Beach. Their furniture will arrive by boat early next week.

Miss Van Ausdall and Mr. Carl Winship of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Nell Tubbs were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Hunt on Ostend Court.

DIVORCE GRANTED

Mrs. Mae Westmoreland of 5010 Newport avenue, was granted an interlocutory decree of divorce last Tuesday from Joseph Westmoreland.

STRAND THEATRE

The attractions for the coming week are the strongest that have been booked in one week for some time. Saturday Peter B. Kyne's "Breed of the Sea," a billowing melodrama of the sea with its glamorous sweep of the open water. A two-fisted punch to the story with a touch of love and adventure which makes it one of the best pictures for the whole family. Our Gang will be seen in "Buried Treasure," the scenic will be "Wild America," also a news weekly.

Sunday and Monday, "McFadden's Flats" with Charlie Murray and Chester Conklin. A mansion of mirth built on the foundation of fun. Rafters and roars, six-reel apartments completely furnished with all modern inconveniences and brand new gags. Charlie and Chester are the gloom chasers. You've laughed at them individually, now you can roar at them collectively. The regular two-reel comedy and Fables make up an all-comedy program.

Tuesday and Wednesday D. W. Griffith's "Sorrows of Satan," with Adolphe Menjou, Lya de Putti, Ricardo Cortez, Carol Dempster and a strong supporting cast. It is a picture of contrasts. First we are taken from the Bohemian quarter to homes of wealth. Then one is introduced to a native youngster and a man of the world. Two women are conspicuous because of their difference. One is all that the word virtuous would seem to imply. The other is the feminine counterpart of evil. The news weekly and a comedy on the same bill.

Thursday and Friday Renee Adoree and Ralph Graves in "Blarney." The true story of a champion, a thrilling epic of the prize ring. Women and wine had beaten him when opportunity knocked. And then a whisp of an Irish lass, with nothing but love and faith to back her, had made him king of the squared circle. A love story charming with the greatest prize fight scenes ever filmed. The second chapter of "The Fire Fighters," a chapter play that is different, also a comedy.

Apropoe of the Nevada gold discovery at Weepah, one of the most startling gold scares in history was started at W. R. Hearst's ranch at San Simeon, Calif., by Sid Grauman, Los Angeles picture house owner. One idle afternoon Grauman rubbed the brass off a new door hinge onto a rock, left it lying on the ground and casually called a workman's attention to it. He thought it was gold, and, along with some dozens of his colleagues working on the main ranch building, suspended work and went prospecting. It was days before the work force could be reassembled.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

ALBERT PAYSON TERHUNE

Von Moltke

"SIRE," said Napoleon III's minister of war, "all is in absolute readiness for the Prussian campaign, down to the last button on the last gaiter of the last soldier."

Now, this was one of the most monumental lies ever uttered.

Napoleon III was well aware that Europe distrusted him. He knew the French were naturally restless, that they had had a long era of military glory, and that a few years of humdrum peace might lead them to weary of him. So he went on the principle that a war every four years would keep them content, swell France's martial renown and make safe his own crown.

In the first decade of the Nineteenth century Napoleon the Great had crushed Prussia to the dust and humiliated her king. The son of that king was on the Prussian throne in 1870 and the great Napoleon's nephew ruled France.

Bismarck, Von Moltke and other Prussian statesmen had foreseen trouble with France and were well prepared for it, even if they did not (as many think) secretly bring about the conflict. France, on the other hand, was totally unready for any such clash. Prussia's revenge for the sixty-year-old injuries was at hand. The overt occasion of the Franco-Prussian war was as follows:

Queen Isabella of Spain was deposed. The Spanish crown was offered to Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern, a relative to King William of Prussia. Napoleon III at once declared that such selection would destroy the "balance of power" and leave France exposed to Prussian attack on east and south. He therefore demanded that Leopold's candidature be withdrawn. King William meekly obeyed. Utterly deceived by such submission, Napoleon went a step further and demanded a pledge from William that no Prussian prince should ever sit on the Spanish throne. William promptly refused to grant so absurd a request and publicly snubbed the ambassador who transmitted it. This was such an excuse as Napoleon had longed for. France at once declared war on Prussia (July 19, 1870) and rushed a body of troops to the German frontier.

So far, so good. But, owing to graft and incompetency, France's army was in wretched condition. Yet France went mad with patriotic zeal. The feats of the first Napoleon against Prussia were recalled. Everyone expected a triumphal march to the Prussian capital. The cry "On to Berlin!" was on all lips.

In contrast to this, Prussia's troops were in splendid preparation. The north and south German states (on many of which Napoleon III had been told he might rely for neutrality or even aid) unanimously joined Prussia, sinking internecine grievances in a common cause; 477,000 men were mustered, as against France's 310,000. The German forces were divided into three armies, which at a signal crept unchecked across the Rhine like a huge three-headed snake, preceded by a cloud of Uhlans, sweeping all before them and striking at France's very heart. King William was commander in chief, with Marshal von Moltke, the peerless tactician, as his chief of staff. The French armies, commanded by Napoleon III in person, made Metz their headquarters.

On August 2, part of Napoleon's northern army drove a handful of Prussians out of the town of Saarbruck. But thereafter Prussia acted ever on the offensive. The French, individually, fought like heroes, but they were no match for their stronger foes. In two armies France's incompetently commanded, ill-equipped forces were hurled back and prevented from uniting. One of these armies was led by Bazaine, former conqueror of Mexico; the other by MacMahon, afterwards president of France. Bazaine was successively beaten at Courcelles, Mars-la-Tour and Gravelotte (August 14, 16 and 18) and was penned up in the city of Metz. MacMahon moved forward to aid him, but on September 1, was surrounded at Sedan, and next day was forced to surrender with forty generals, 4,000 lesser officers and 84,000 men.

Napoleon III, who was with MacMahon's army, was also captured and packed off a prisoner to a German fortress. At news of his capture and the disgraceful failure of French arms rage and mortification seized all France. Napoleon was deposed; his wife and son were compelled to flee secretly to England; and, September 4, a republic was proclaimed.

On September 19, the Germans besieged Paris. On September 28 Bazaine surrendered at Metz. The latter city, snatched from Germany in the days of Charles V, once more was held by its original masters. Paris fell after a long and gallant siege; armies sent to relieve it were beaten. France was at Prussia's mercy. On March 1, 1871, the victorious Germans entered Paris; passing through the mighty Arc de Triomphe, which had been erected to commemorate the martial triumphs of France; thus adding a climax to perhaps the grimmest irony in the annals of warfare.

The provinces of Alsace and Lorraine and an indemnity of $1,000,000,000 were exacted by the conquerors—a fairly cheap fee for curing France of Napoleonism!

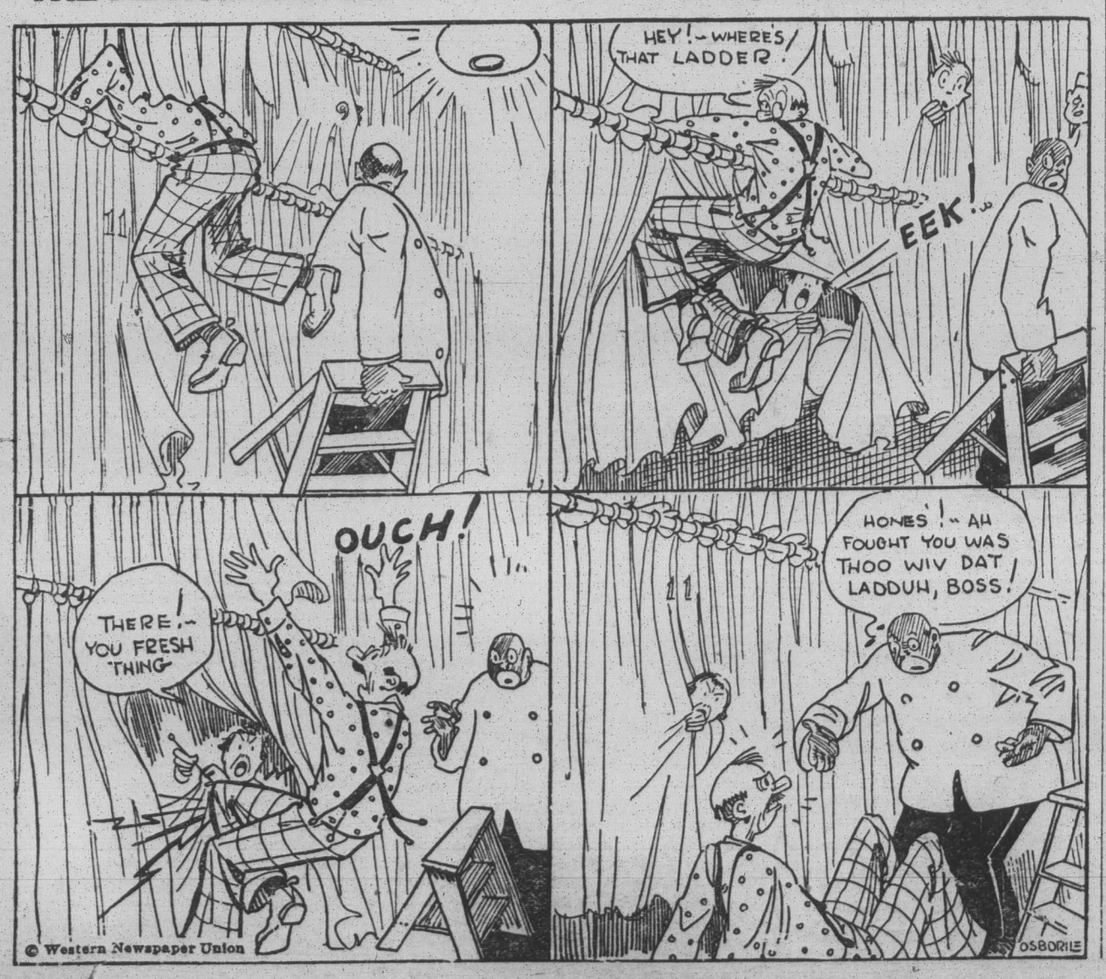
THE FEATHERHEADS — A Falling Out With the Porter



CHIC BLACK AND WHITE EFFECTS; CUTE GINGHAM ROMPER SUITS

REVERSE the order of black-and-white and you have white-and-black. The mode is doing just that. White with just enough black not to destroy its daintiness is the promise of summer apparel. The vogue extends to footwear, headwear and all the accessories which go to make up a perfect ensemble.

Adorable for summer frocks are the white-with-black georgettes printed in entrancing floral patterns. These are forecasted to enjoy a tremendous vogue. If a frock should, perchance, escape being made of a white-and-black transparency of some sort or other, it will be because the designer preferred to work out the combination by using black as a trimming on white. The accompanying illustration demonstrates the idea most beautifully.

A fascinating effect results when the hemline is embellished (see the figure to the left) with myriads of hemstitched black chiffon petals piled one upon another, so that when milady steps her frock expresses a very "poetry of motion." The manner in which the drapery of this dress is brought to the front in a bow tie is very enlightening as to a popular style trend. For the matron no more appropriate costume can be conceived of than this combination afternoon and dinner dress. We say "combination" advisedly for it is designed with a coat which, removed, reveals a charming after-six-o'clock gown.

An interesting interpretation of white-with-black is given in the model to the right. It is of handsome white crepe satin, an applique of black supplying the decorative note. The coat is silver gray with a blended twin beaver collar.

And the shoes, the gloves, the hats to wear with frocks such as these. Slippers of suave white kidskin, piped or appliqued with black, gloves whose cuffs are elaborately black embroidered, or later still, beaded; hats of white violets or for mid-summer, the transparent black or white wide brimmed capeline—these are all included in fashion's white-with-black program.

A modern playground, where children of the well-to-do are wont to congregate presents rather an appearance of a Lilliputian style-show, with miniature mannikins all "dolled up" in fetching frocks and rompers, with cunning socks to match and amusing little sweaters, or perhaps a protecting coatee, with possibly a hat now and then. Even their little tin pails and shovels, their jumping ropes, dolls 'n everything seem selected from the standpoint of fitting into the color scheme.

Mother does not say any more of her child's simple play frock: "I'll just run it together in a hurry." She goes about her sewing preparedly—seeks the latest patterns, studies up on newest embroidery and applique ideas. As to choosing materials, that is the most important thing of all.

Of course with most mothers "gingham first" is the sentiment. If wise as to fashion's trend these doting mothers will make it a rule to always buy a solid color for trimming. Even the simplest rompers exploit the compose idea nowadays. The gay-patterned gingham rompers in the picture cleverly takes unto itself raglan sleeves made of a solid color, with pockets to match. It is well to remember in selecting patterns for tots' frocks and rompers that raglan sleeves are the "last word." Note, too, the touch of smocking across the front neckline of this romper model. Few coats or frocks, these days, escape the smocking vogue.

Two Adorable Summer Costumes.

New CALIFORNIA THEATER

The tragedy hidden behind the many "business" marriages of the rich is dramatically depicted in "The Tender Hour," the George Fitzmaurice production which comes as the feature attraction at the New California theatre for one week starting today.

That the situation as it is shown in the plot of the picture is a real one is woven by at least half a dozen such marriages which have ended disastrously and with much sensation publicity in the past year.

Billie Dove and Ben Lyon play featured roles in the picture, with Alec B. Francis, Montagu Love and others in prominent parts. The picture is based on an original screen story by Carey Wilson, and was produced by John McCormick, general manager of West Coast production for First National.

Fanchon and Marco present another gorgeous spectacle stage presentation, "Bugs Idea", featuring Homer Dickinson, national star of the Follies and Winter Garden shows, with Dorothy Lee, clever little comedienne and the Hollywood Beauties in a variety of specialties and ensemble routines.

This is Al Lyons Week, honoring the popular director who left for his vacation and was forced to spend part of it in the hospital with a sudden and severe illness. He is returning to the New California quite recovered and will again wield the baton and act as master of ceremonies for the magnificient Fanchon and Marco productions.

International news-reel, a group of short screen subjects and the local weekly round out the excellent bill for the week.

BALBOA THEATRE

Poor old Pa Potter, door-mat of the entire Potter family tribe, is in the movies and more people are laughing at him now than ever giggled at his misadventures in print. The Potters, with W. C. Fields starred as Pa, comes to the Balboa theatre for three days starting Sunday.

The story concerns itself with the episode in which Pa becomes interested in an oil deal. If you've never read J. P. McEvoy's comic strip or seen his play, it might be wise to say that "The Potters," are a family of average, human, everyday Americans. Pa is honest, blundering and ambitious. Ma loves her husband but continually argues with him. Mamie is eighteen and a flapper. Bill has reached an age where he can sport a cute little mustache.

Nothing but laugh provoking scenes follow on each other's heels. Ivy Harris and Mary Alden are featured in Mr. Field's support. Fred Newmeyer directed for Paramount.

"The Humdinger," a Tuxedo comedy, "Reflections" and the world newsreel furnish additional features of entertainment. Raymond Godden and Miss Evelyn Boyd will be heard at the console in a musical program of special arrangement.

Starting Wednesday, and for four days, Harry Langdon will appear in "His First Flame," another roaring comedy which in this instance has a double meaning, relating, as it does, to Harry's first love affair and also to his first experience as a fire fighter The fun promises to be fast and furious throughout, and the climax is said to be a vertible side-splitter.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE JAM POT

By CAROLINE B. KING
Culinary expert and lecturer on household science.

PRUNE marmalade is easily prepared. Use medium sized prunes cooked in the usual way. Cut into small pieces. To one pound of pulp, add one orange cut in tiny particles. Cook slowly. Add one pound of sugar to one and one-half pounds of prunes. Simmer till thick and add three tablespoonfuls of chopped pecan meats.

Polychrome Conserve

One-half pound of dried peaches, one-half pound of apricots, one-half pound of prunes, one orange, one-half cupful seedless raisins, one-quarter cupful nut meats, one and one-half pounds of sugar. Press the dried fruits, which have been cooked in the usual way, through a sieve, add grated peel and juice of the orange, and the raisins chopped fine, nutmeats and sugar and simmer altogether until thick.

Amber Marmalade

One grapefruit, one orange and one lemon are required for the marmalade. Wash the fruit well and cut it in slices, removing all seeds. Run the fruit through the food chopper, using the coarse blade and save all the juice. Measure the fruit and juice and cover it with three times its quantity of water. Let it stand for twenty-four hours, then put on the fire and cook for twenty minutes. Let stand again till cool, then measure and allow a cup of sugar for each cup of fruit and juice. Mix well and let stand again for twenty-four hours, then bring slowly to the boiling point and simmer for three hours. This amount of fruit and sugar will make nine or ten glasses of delicious marmalade.

Strawberry and Pineapple Conserve

Allow two quarts of berries to one medium sized pineapple. Pare the latter and cut it in small pieces. Put over the fire with just enough water to keep the fruit from sticking, and cook for half an hour. Then add the berries which have been hulled and washed. Cook ten minutes, stirring often so that the berries will become broken, add an equal amount of sugar as the fruits are mixed, and cook till thick, stirring frequently.

Sunshine Chips

Pare carrots and cut them into the thinnest wafer-like slices, and allow three-quarters of a pound of sugar to each pound of the vegetable; also half a cupful of lemon juice. Place the carrot slices in layers in a saucepan, sprinkling the layers with the sugar; pour the lemon juice over all and leave to marinate for twenty-four hours. Then add water just to cover, and drop in a few pieces of ginger root cut in slices. Simmer till the carrot slices are tender, then set aside to cool. After three or four days, drain the syrup from the vegetable and cook it slowly till very thick. Then arrange the carrots in sterilized jars, pour the hot syrup over them and seal when cool.

Prune and Date Jam

1 pound prunes
1 pound dates
¼ cupful sugar
2 tablespoonfuls of lemon juice
2 tablespoonfuls of orange juice

Cook prunes until tender in a small amount of water. Remove stones and add dates, which have been stoned and chopped. Add lemon and orange juice and sugar. Cook the mixture until thick.

SUCCESS

By SIDNEY J. BURGOYNE

"AS A man thinketh, he is," my friend;
So if you would win Success,
You must THINK and WORK to that very end,
And you'll have Success—no less.

When you are ready, you'll find it there
Waiting outside your door,
And you can take just as big a share
As you deserve—but no more.

Success doesn't come to those who shirk,
It's not at your beck and call—
You must add to your "thinking" some darn good work
And EARN Success—that's all.

So THINK Success—But don't stop there,
Pitch in and work for it, too;
There's nothing too great to do and dare
To help you "put it through."

If you'll "use your dome" to THINK Success,
And your hands and heart and soul
To tackle the job and WORK for Success—
You're going to reach your goal!

But don't let a thought of failure in,
And shut every fear-thought out;
For there's one thing sure—no man can win
Success through distrust and doubt.

You've got to KNOW you can and will,
And value yourself at par
Whatever the job you have to fill;
AS YOU THINK AND WORK—
YOU ARE.

Easy Come, Easy Go

There are some strange tales of Broadway, but this true story is one of the strangest that we have heard:

A French-Canuck who chopped down trees in the Canadian woods for 15 years at a salary of $100 per annum, came to New York for a holiday after 15 years of pine cutting in the woods. Within one hour he lost his $1,500 in a gambling house, and remarked, "Well, such is life. It's another 15 years in the woods for me—but easy come, easy go."—The Outlook.

"DON'T walk through it. Don't smell it. Don't touch it. Go hungry for days first."

She's right. Peterman's Roach Food exterminates every roach in your house. Nothing is left but a little dry dust.

Some housewives make the mistake of fighting cockroaches with a spray. Those are the houses roaches stay in. They live down behind baseboards, under the floors. No spray can possibly reach them, or their young, or their eggs.

Only a powder can exterminate them. Peterman's Roach Food is the right powder. Just one roach gets a little powder on his legs. Back to his nest he goes. He crawls over the others and eggs. Every roach he touches dies and disintegrates.

Here is the right insecticide for each insect:

PETERMAN'S ROACH FOOD exterminates cockroaches.
PETERMAN'S ANT FOOD exterminates ants.
FLYOSAN kills flies and mosquitoes.
PETERMAN'S DISCOVERY exterminates bedbugs.
PETERMAN'S MOTH FOOD protects against moths.

You must have a specific insecticide for each insect. No single insecticide will exterminate them all. We know that is true. We have had nearly 50 years' experience.

Peterman's has the right insecticide for each insect. On sale wherever drugs are sold.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

ART OF RECUPERATION

THE idea prevails that when one is inclined to lag a bit in one's field of routine duty one needs a season of absolute idleness, as if loafing were the open sesame to perfect rest and the fairyland of youthful dreams.

Generally speaking, no thought can be more erroneous and misleading.

There is nothing quite so befogging and injurious to the active mind as a sudden cessation of its energy or curtailment of its habitual effort.

Rest is not to be found in indolence but in a change of activity, where both body and mind perform a new form of work.

When the thinker becomes tired and feels that he cannot proceed another step in the direction he has been so long pursuing, he is in need of change in his mental environment, where he will encounter new thoughts in new settings.

The brain requires a new diet, a savory dish of some sort which will be easily digested and leave a pleasant taste.

Frequently a radical change in reading will work this transformation in a day or two, and rekindle the slumbering fire from live embers hidden in the ashes.

If you are worn out in the tiresome chase of letters, turn awhile to figures, where you are compelled by the mere novelty of the change to conjure up some long-forgotten rule in algebra.

Should that fail to satisfy, take a peep into the body of your old Latin reader, or dip into astronomy, where you are forced to think in new dimensions and move out into the immeasurable vastness of which our own little globe is but a speck no larger than a grain of mustard seed.

In a little while you will find that this novel operation of the mind gives rest to your thinking faculties, broadens your vision, refreshes and strengthens your whole being.

Life assumes a new meaning. The dull skies become golden and gladsome. Frowning faces wear winsome smiles, and in the very joy of your new existence you go back to your old, dry humdrum work, which in some way realizes that you are the master to whom it must yield in the future with utmost complacency.

In a sense, love is everything. It is the key to life, and its influences are those that move the world. Live only in the thought of love for all and you will draw love to you from all. Live in the thought of malice and hatred and malice and hatred will come back to you.—Trine.

MILK DISHES

MILK, the best of all foods for children, is always a good foundation for any number of desserts, wholesome alike for old and young, and for those of weakened digestion.

A smooth, good custard is made by using a pint of milk with two eggs, adding a pinch of salt and such flavoring as suits the taste. If one wishes a custard thick enough to mold, add three to four eggs to a pint of milk. The more egg the more nutriment, so it is a dish to be recommended for those who would be built up.

Baked Custard.

Beat four eggs slightly, add a half cupful of sugar, a pinch of salt, a half teaspoonful of grated nutmeg or cinnamon, and one quart of milk. Set into the oven in a pan of water and bake until firm enough to cut with a knife, and the knife comes out clean. Overcooking will curdle or coarsen the custard, making it less digestible and far less attractive in appearance. A perfect custard should be as smooth and even grained as cream. Remember to remove the custards from the water pan when taken from the oven, or they will continue to cook in the hot water. Set into cold water to chill and serve well chilled.

Ginger Custard.

Line buttered custard cups with strips of Canton ginger, then pour in carefully a thick custard, using four eggs, a pint of milk, one-third of a cupful of sugar, a pinch of salt and two teaspoonfuls of the ginger sirup. Lacking the sirup, flavor to taste with orange or lemon. Beat the eggs very slightly, add sugar, salt, milk and flavoring, then strain into molds. Set into hot water and bake until firm. Serve with a spoonful of the sirup over the top of each.

Caramel Custard.

This is a custard which is particularly well liked. It may be made by adding the caramel (melted sugar until brown) to the custard prepared as above or the sugar may be browned and poured into the molds; have them hot and turn until the bottom and sides are well coated with the caramel, then turn in the custard and bake as usual. As it is well to remember that caramelizing sugar destroys some of its sweetness, more sugar should be used than is usual.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

THE MEASURING WORM

IF YOU are sitting on the piazza of a farmhouse and see one of those little creatures known as the measuring worm looping its way over your clothing, brush it off right away. If you don't you are likely to die before your time—as any country-bred person can tell you. They will probably laugh at the superstition as they recount it, but, nevertheless, watch how quickly they brush off a measuring worm if one gets on them.

This old superstition arises from that association of ideas with things, so common with our prehistoric ancestors and so natural to the human mind in all ages—not by any means excepting this age.

The little larva of the geometric moth has feet only at bow and stern, so when he moves he draws up his hind feet, places them close to his front feet and then sends his front feet on ahead for a fresh foothold; apparently measuring off the person upon whom he crawls in slow and solemn manner.

Why is he making this peculiar motion, so different from the method of locomotion with other worms? The submerged, primitive mind arises from the "unconscious" and answers, "He is measuring out the life of man"; "He is measuring for a shroud." It is useless to argue that he may be measuring you for a new suit of clothes; for the primitive mind's natural tendency is to look on the dark side of things and regard the unusual as the threatening. The writer has heard children cry with awe: "Brush off that measuring worm! If you don't, when he takes his last measure you die."

Sitting in his comfortable home at 2219 107th Avenue, Oakland, Calif., Mr. Langhans told how Tanlac had rebuilt strength and vigor for himself and his charming wife. "Tanlac worked wonders for my wife," he said. "She suffered from high blood pressure, neuritis and general run-down condition. Tanlac relieved her.

Where Is Daniel Boone Buried?

BOONE'S MONUMENT, FRANKFORT, KY.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

WHERE is Daniel Boone, the great frontiersman, buried?

Ask a Kentucklan that and he will probably answer, "Why, in our state capital, Frankfort, of course!"

Tell a Missourian what the Kentucklan has said, and his comment may possibly be the traditional, "Show me!"

Read any of the dozens of biographies of Daniel Boone and you'll probably find a statement something like this: "He was buried in Missouri but in 1845, at the urgent request of Kentucky the bodies of Boone and his wife were removed to Kentucky and reburied in Frankfort." But it's just possible that all of the histories are wrong and that Daniel Boone still sleeps beneath the soil of Missouri instead of the blue grass of Kentucky. Surprising as that statement may be, there seems to be some foundation of fact for the belief that "somebody blundered" in 1845 and that, as a result, the body of an unknown stranger, instead of the body of the famous pioneer, rests beside that of Rebecca Boone in the Kentucky capital.

All of which came about through the discovery recently in an old hair trunk in the attic of a farmhouse near Boonville, Mo., of several letters written to Capt. Nathan Boone, Daniel Boone's son, by the governor of Kentucky and other distinguished men in that state, asking his permission for the removal of the bodies of Daniel Boone and his wife to Frankfort for burial. The discovery of these letters started a representative of the Kansas City Star upon an investigation which has raised the question of where Daniel Boone is actually buried and has uncovered evidence which indicates that it is in Missouri and not in Kentucky.

As a necessary background for a consideration of this startling theory, it may be well to go back into some of the familiar history of Daniel Boone. It will be remembered how the infant state of Kentucky, displaying an ingratitude not at all unusual in the history of America, failed to confirm Boone's title to lands within its borders. So the old pioneer took his family to Missouri, which was then Spanish territory. The news of his coming had preceded him and the Spanish governor gave him a grant of a thousand acres of fine bottomland on the Femme Osage creek and made him syndic (an office combining the duties of judge, jury, military commander and sheriff) for his district. Here he lived happily for several years, but when Missouri, as a part of the Louisiana purchase, came under the American flag, misfortune overtook Boone. The federal government refused to recognize the title to the acres granted him by the Spanish and again he found himself landless. He sent in memorials to both the Kentucky legislature and congress but it was not until six years had passed that congress took action to confirm his Spanish land grants. After the death of his wife, he made his home with his son, Nathan, in St. Charles county and there he died September 26, 1820, at the age of eighty-six.

When Rebecca Boone died in 1813 she was buried in a cemetery on a knoll upon the bank of Teugue creek about a mile and a half north of the present town of Marthasville in Warren county, Mo. It had been Boone's oft-repeated request that he be placed beside her when he died and by the side of her grave he had marked a place for his own. It is at this point in the narrative that the possibility that "somebody blundered" enters, according to descendants of Boone who live in Missouri and who have made a careful investigation of the circumstances connected with the burial and removal. One of these is Jesse P. Crump, vice president of the Kansas City Title and Trust company, director in Missouri of the Boone Family association and an authority on the life of his illustrious ancestor. From his statements and from those of David Gardyne of Marthasville, Mo., who has spent years tracing up every item connected with the life of Boone, as presented by the Kansas City Star writer, the evidence sums up as follows:

When the grave diggers had nearly completed the grave beside that of Rebecca Boone, they uncovered a human skeleton. So the grave was refilled and this unknown preoccupant was left in possession. They then attempted to make a grave on the other side of the Rebecca Boone grave. But here the hill sloped sharply away, making it unsuitable for a grave. So they had to try again and a grave was dug either at the head or the foot of Rebecca's grave (no one knows for certain which) so as to carry out his request to lie beside his beloved. There Daniel Boone was buried and there, his descendants believe, he sleeps today.

The next chapter in the "somebody blundered" chain of events occurred a little later when headstones were placed at the Boone graves. The stones were dragged to the graves by a yoke of oxen, driven by a man whose name is lost to history. When he arrived there he was not certain as to the placing of the stones and went to a farmhouse nearby. The woman there returned with him to the graves and after discussing the situation for a time, finally pointed to the two graves side by side and said "I think those are the graves." Accordingly the headstone for Rebecca Boone was placed correctly but the one for Daniel Boone was placed at the head of the grave occupied by the unknown stranger.

The final "blunder" (if such it was) was made in 1845 when Kentucky, in an effort to pay its tardy honors to the man to whom it owed so much, started the movement to have the bodies of Boone and his wife returned to the Blue Grass state. As the result of the letters from Kentucky officials to Nathan Boone such as those recently discovered, the Boone family finally gave its consent to the removal. A delegation of Kentucklans arrived to obtain the bodies. They opened the grave of Rebecca Boone and found the coffin in an excellent state of preservation but when they opened the grave beside her, which they believed to contain the body of the old pioneer, they found only a few pieces of the coffin and the larger bones of a human skeleton.

Apparently no one at the time was struck by the inconsistency of this fact; how could Rebecca's coffin be in such perfect state of preservation, while the other, supposed to contain the body of her husband, who was buried seven years after her, had so nearly perished? At any rate the contents of the two graves were placed in elaborate coffins and carried to Frankfort. The ceremony of reburial at the Kentucky capital as described in an article in Harper's Magazine in 1859 tells us that:

Having obtained the consent of the surviving relatives of the pioneer for the removal of the remains, a committee, charged with the execution of he will of the legislature, appointed the 13th of September, 1845, as the day when public funeral honors should be paid to the illustrious dead and their remains be deposited in the bosom of Kentucky. The events of that day will ever form an interesting page in the annals of the state. On that occasion historic men—men whose names will never be forgotten—gathered around the coffin of a more eminent historic character and bore it to the grave. The pallbearers were fitly chosen from among the elders and the honored men of the commonwealth. . . .

Thousands of people had gathered from all parts of the state to participate in the solemn funeral rites. A procession was formed, consisting of military companies, Masonic and other societies in regalia, and a great number of citizens on horseback and on foot, making the line more than a mile in length. The broad grave for the two coffins was dug in a lovely shaded hollow near the banks of the Kentucky river and around it the multitude gathered. The religious ceremonies were performed by Rev. Mr. Godell of the Baptist church and were followed by an oration by Hon. J. J. Crittenden, the able representative of Kentucky in the senate of the United States. When the closing prayer had been offered, and the benediction pronounced, the coffins were lowered into the grave and over them was piled a mound of earth—yet the only monument that marks the spot where the noble pioneers are buried.

What was true in 1859 was still true 20 years later—that this mound of earth was "yet the only monument that marks the spot where the noble pioneers are buried." For, strange to say, having paid these signal honors to its great pioneer, Kentucky again showed a strange indifference to him and it was not until 1880 that the present monument was erected in Frankfort.

Daniel Boone has been honored by memorials in many other places—in the monument which marks the site of Boonesborough, the "station" which he established in 1775; in the statue of him in Cherokee park in Louisville; in the monument which stands in Cumberland Gap, where Boone stood and looked into his land of promise, even though it was the "Dark and Bloody Ground," and which may some day be replaced with a heroic statue of the great pioneer; and in the Boone Trail highway which follows his path into the West. Last year he became one of America's immortals when a bust of him was unveiled in the Hall of Fame at New York university.

But to Kentuckians the monument in Frankfort (an unpretentious one, it would seem, considering the worth of his services to that commonwealth), is something of a state shrine. It will be startling news to Kentucklans if it is ever definitely proved that Daniel Boone does not sleep beneath that monument. There were times during the bloody years of the Revolution in the West that Kentucky owed her very existence to the strong right arm and stout heart of Daniel Boone. Yet for all that he did for her she allowed him to be defrauded of his lands and saw him, saddened by her ingratitude, set forth to seek a new home in another state. A quarter of a century after his death she paid him tardy honors, then neglected his memory for another 35 years.

If, as the Missouri descendants of Boone believe, it is not only possible but probable, that Daniel Boone still sleeps in Missouri and not in Kentucky, how Fate must smile at the delicious irony of the situation—Kentucklans of today making a pilgrimage to this state shrine, unconscious of the fact that they are standing in reverence at the last resting place of an unknown stranger and not that of their great hero whom the Kentuckians of yesterday denied the full measure of honor and the rewards which he so richly deserved!

First "Long Horns"

The long-horned cattle are the descendants of the old Spanish cattle brought to Mexico by the early explorers (known as the Conquistadores). Some of these cattle were brought into the region now know as Texas and Mexico and became wild and formed the start of the long-horned cattle. They were numerous in the Southwest until a few years ago. Modern beef-bred bulls have been used with these herds until now the old long-horns are practically extinct in the United States.

What Shape Face?

If your profile is concave, says Popular Science Monthly, you are likely to be a slow but determined thinker. If it is convex, sloping either way from the tip of the nose, your thinking is apt to be quick, but indecisive. But if a line drawn from the forehead to the chin indicates a plane profile, you are both quick and steady. You combine the best qualities of the other two.

BUILDING A TRACK

Far down on the West Side of the city Uncle John took Douglas and Dorothy.

He wanted to show them something he considered one of the greatest wonders of the age.

They looked from a station platform of the elevated railway and saw men working on the tracks. Every few minutes a train would come along and the men would get away from the course of the train. Then great machinery was at work and it seemed as if it were arranged in just such a way so that it would not interfere with the trains coming and going.

"The elevated always seems marvelous to me," said Dorothy.

"And what fun it is to see them building another track," said Douglas. "I suppose the workmen don't think it is such fun as they are always moving out of the way of trains. They seem to run as many trains as ever, though I don't suppose they do" he ended.

"Yes, they do," said Uncle John. "And that is the most extraordinary part of it all to me. They have been putting in a third track along this line. Building it and making it so that soon it will be ready, too, for trains. And through it all not a train has missed its trip. Everything has gone on in the regular scheduled time."

"I don't see how they go on just the same when the men were building a new track," said Douglas.

"I should think that they could never get anything finished in such a way," said Dorothy.

"That is the double wonder of it," said Uncle John. "They build a new track up in the air on the elevated line which always seems quite enough of a feat.

"And then they build it without letting a train miss any time, and with everything in regular, clockwork order. Between the trips the men work. The beams are riveted together, the ties and the tracks are laid.

"Soon they will be ready for more trains and more passengers. But in the meantime none of the passengers have been delayed because of this work."

Douglas and Dorothy watched the men working. They saw that it was really so. They stopped every time a train was coming along and got out of the way.

And then they continued their work.

"By just doing a little at a time and by keeping it up, they have done a great deal, haven't they, Uncle John?" asked Douglas.

"It's certainly so," said Uncle John, "and now, I think we'll ride uptown in one of these trains for which the workmen get out of the way between moments of work."

And as the children were leaving the station in the elevated train with Uncle John, Dorothy said:

"I suppose the men are working again now that our train has just gone on."

And Douglas added:

"Why yes, of course, for isn't this a great city?"

Uncle John chuckled.

His Training

A young man enlisted in the army upon the advice of his father, who believed that the drill, physical exercise and vocational training would be the making of his son. The father asked him to wire at the end of the year if he liked the army.

At the end of the year, the young man sent the following telegram:

"Yes."

The father, having forgotten his request, wired back:

"Yes, what?"

"Yes, sir," came back the reply.—El Morro News.

Horses Can't Talk

Harry and Howard were playing horse one day and Harry gave Howard a hard lash over the legs. "Ouch!" he cried out, and Harry said: "Oh, Howard, you mustn't say 'ouch'—horses can't talk."

Not Convinced

"When I was a little boy your age I didn't tell lies," said dad reprovingly.

"How old were you when you started, pop?" inquired the small boy skeptically.—Safety and Service.

Youngster Set on Mission in Life

A Butler coed had been out riding with her aunt who was not considered the most careful driver in the world.

"Aren't you afraid to ride through downtown traffic with Aunt Mag?" the college girl's mother asked her.

"No, I'm not," came the flip answer. "Anyway, what if we do have an accident and I get killed, I'd just as soon die now as any other time."

"Why, Catherine, you ought to be ashamed of yourself, talking like that. You should have some great ambition and want to live," advised her thirteen-year-old sister, a light in the freshman class at Shortridge high school, who had been listening to the conversation.

"Well, I'm sorry, but I'd just as soon die as not," replied the world-weary college student.

"Not I," rejoined her sister. "I'm going to live and raise a family."—Indianapolis News.

Mixture of Races

The Welsh are a Celtic people. At the time of the coming of the Romans in 55 B. C. the natives of Wales represented a mixture of the primitive Iberians and the later invading Celts, all bearing the general name of Cymry. Afterward the Celtic inhabitants of Britain took refuge in Wales, where they were driven westward by the Anglo-Saxons. In time they merged with the natives.

TWO WOMEN FOUND HELP

Their Sickness Banished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Nina Matteson, Box 206, Oxford, N. Y., writes—"If it had not been for your medicine, I could not have done my work as it should have been done. Mother told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I had read in different papers what it had done for different women. She wanted me to try it, so my husband got me one bottle at first; then I took two others. Now I am feeling quite strong again."

Mrs. Ernest Tanguay of Adams, Mass., says she was ill for four years and could not sleep nights or go out on the street. She read about the Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. After taking eight bottles she was able to do all her work and go anywhere and is quite herself again.

This dependable Vegetable Compound is a household word in thousands of homes. The fourth generation is now learning the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than half a century, this reliable medicine has been used by women with very satisfactory results. If the Vegetable Compound has helped other women, why shouldn't it help you?

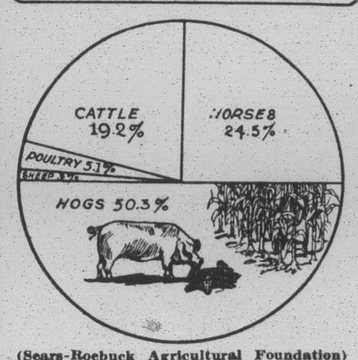
Cutting Down Corn Surplus



(Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation)

Whether you prefer your corn nicely buttered on the ear, or in the form of roast pork with fried apples, there are on the average 25½ bushels of corn coming to each person in the United States every year, according to experts of the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. In 1925 there was a bit more; this year there will probably be a few ears less apiece but plenty for all of us just the same.

Less than a fifth of all this corn leaves the farm. Excluding a small fraction of the best grade that is kept out for seed purposes, 81% of those 2,850,000,000 bushels runs around on legs in the following forms: Hogs, 50.3%; horses, 24.5%; cattle, 19.2%; poultry, 5.1% and sheep, 0.9%.

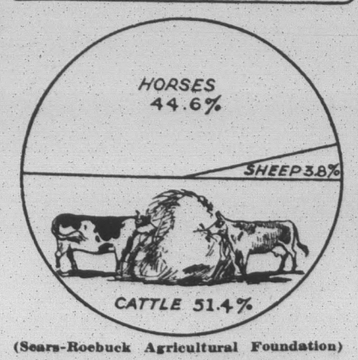
Hay Cafeteria Service



(Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation)

Our hay crop furnishes one of the largest cafeteria services in existence, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. Seventy-eight million tons, it is expected, will be produced in 1926, a large part of which will be consumed by cattle. According to figures put out by the Department of Agriculture, 51.4% of this amount will be eaten by cattle, 44.6% by horses and the remaining 3.8% by sheep. The amount of hay eaten by hogs is very slight, only a small fraction of one per cent of the alfalfa crop. As in the case of other feed crops, most of this hay is consumed right on the farm where it is grown.
